FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Audubon Talk on Birds and Gardening at Cragin Rescheduled

Winter weather compelled the program rescheduling of “Creating a Garden Habitat for Birds” to Wednesday, February 25 at 7:00 p.m. at Cragin Memorial Library Norton Room. Kasha Breau, Connecticut Audubon – Glastonbury Center Educator and Naturalist will provide the free informational program and slide show on garden habitats for local birds using trees, shrubs, flowers, and native plants. The talk is sponsored by the Colchester Garden Club (through proceeds from an Aetna Volunteer grant) and the Cragin Memorial Library. The event supports Colchester’s pursuit of the Community Wildlife Habitat certification from the National Wildlife Federation. You can further help by certifying your property as an Individual Wildlife Habitat. For details go to: <http://www.nwf.org/backyard/> or pick up a brochure at the event or library information table.

The Colchester Garden Club is a member of the Federated Garden Clubs of Connecticut and the National Garden Clubs, Inc. Their mission is to provide knowledge of horticulture interest with education, volunteer work, resources, and networking opportunities for our members to promote the love of gardening through civic, community and environmental responsibility. The Colchester Garden Club meets the third Thursday of each month at the Cragin Memorial Library at 6:30 p.m. For membership information contact Cathy at 267-8705.

The Connecticut Audubon Society’s focus is to promote awareness of the Connecticut River ecosystem, the birds and habitats it supports, and foster their preservation through education and related activities. For more information about their location and the many programs and activities in Glastonbury go to:
